A FINE LOT OF FISH.

Numerous Specimens Obtained During the Cruise of the Steamer Albatross.

Cases and Tanks at the Smithsonian Now Filled with the Collection.

Every Species from Minute Foraminifers to the Highest Forms of Marine Animal Life.

Some Curiosities Which Will Probably Seriously Parzle the Scientific World.

The Smithsonian institution has received the last of the huge collection brought here by the fish commission steamor Albatross from her recently completed cruise in the Caribbean sea and gulf of Mexico and along the South American coast.

The cases and tanks containing the collection nearly fill the huge basement below the chapel, while all the available space in the chapel itself is also filled with cases on which the staff of the Fish commission naturalists is busily engaged in assorting, examining, and identifying, as far as possible, the specimens obtained.

The Albatross in her cruise went first to The Albatross in her cruise went first to St. Thomas, in the Windward islands, thence to Trinidad and the Gulf of Pavia, on the South American coast, to the island of Curacoa, the coast of Hayti, Santiago de Duba, Kingston, Jamaica, and the border of bays to the east of that island, to Savanilla, on the north ceast of New Granada Assim. on the north ceast of New Granada, Aspin-wall, Old Providence group, and Key West, From Key West she went to Havana and along the ceast in that neighborhood, thence along the coast in that neighborhood, thence along the north coast to the west end of Cuba, and back to Key West before returning here. At each point, by officers and mea, under direction of Prof. James E. Benediet, the surface, shore, and bottom of the neighboring waters were thoroughly searched for the wonders of marine animal life, and the results, carefully preserved, are in these many tanks and cases now here. Besides these searches, the bottom of the sea was trawled and dredged at many points, ranging from twenty fathoms to over two miles in depth, and much more was thus added to the collection of wonders that the sea has yielded up. The collection, as received here, amounted to many tons weight, and comprises fully half a million spenimens, ranging from the minute forms of foraminiranging from the minute forms of foraminiform, globigerins, and pteropods (shells and worms), found on the bottom, to the highest forms of marine animal life.

Many of the specimens found are of animals herotofore known, but so rare that each individual becomes a grand sciontific prize. In this class in the lines crimes or rock life. vidual becomes a grand scientific prize. In this class is the linus crimes or rock lily. This is an animal which grows firmly on rocks at the sea bottom, like plants of vegeta-able growth, and is in form and general appearance very like the well-known tigor lily of our gardens. The stem is smooth, having tendril-like leaves, and is crowned with a large number of branches, like the petals of the lily. These "petals" are the mouths of the plant, which feed, it is supposed, upon the smaller forms of jelly fish and like animals. Until the cruise of the United States steamer Illake, three years ago, with Mr. Agassiz, but three specimens of this plant animal had ever been found, and of these none were perfect. At that time the Blake, while trawling just east of the entrance to while trawling just east of the entrance to Havana, while dredging in shoal water near shore, found a place in about one hundred fathoms where a number of specimens were secured. In this place the Albatross, with its secured. In this place the Albstrosa, with its superior apparatus for examining the bottom, secured, in two days' work, about two hundred perfect specimens. Prior to this find, while on the south coast of Cuba, near the bay of Santiago de Cuba, five perfect specimens of this genius were found by trawling, at the depth of 500 to 890 (athoms, and these specimens represented fathoms, and these specimens represented three different varieties (these near Havana were of two), one of which had never been seen before. At another haul of the deep sea trawl, between Trinidad and Curacoa, off the coast of Venezuela, a mutilated specimen of this family was brought up, which has never before been seen. The large find of these animal lilies is sufficient to enable the naturalists of all the great museums of the world to examine and study specimens of the wo well known varieties.

A number of fish were found which cannot yet be determined, and one, a curiously shaped black one, is undoubtedly new to the scientific world.

Star fish in every variety of color, shape, and size are included in the collection, from a huge scarlet one of nearly two feet diame-ter to tiny ones from great depths that can scarcely be distinguished by the naked eye, scarcely be distinguished by the naked eye, and ranging in numbers into many thousands. Unique among the many forms is a tiny fellow that occupies in solitary state a phini of alcohol. This is an infant flying fish not over an inch in length. It is perfectly developed, its wings looking far more delicate and unsubstantial than the dew on a spider web, and was caught at sea by Mr. Nye, one of the other contractions are the statement of the other or the othe of the collectors, with a surface net while the infant was feeding about a clump of sea weed.
It is believed to be the only one of its size

Lobsters and their congeners, the crawfish, are plentiful, while the crab family has hundreds of varieties, and thousands of individuals, from the deep-sea liliputian not larger than a fly, to a hermit that was caught living in and traveling about with a huge conch shell that weighed nearly five pounds. Corais of every shape and variety, branch, rose paim, horn, lace, and the lovely buff red and purple and black sea forms. Not the least interesting are the hundreds ever found.

Not the least interesting are the hundreds of phials containing specimens of the sea bottom. These are brought up by the cup when making soundings, and what is here in these phials is the residue, after the coze that covers the ocean bed is washed away on board ship. This fine sand, as it looks to be, is composed of the shells of pteropods and globigerina, and the tube covers of faramitations, that have lived in the sea their kein. nifers, that have lived in the sea their brief day, and dying have suck to where they lay—how many hundreds of years?—before being brought to the surface. These shells and tubes are so fine that only by aid of high grade microscopes can their forms be observed; so small, in fact, that it is estimated that ten millions would not occupy the space of souther train.

of a cubic inch. The number of fishes proper brought is not so great, but it is believed that specimens of every variety known to the fauna of the Caribbeau are embraced, except the very large and commonly known, such as the whate, dolphin, porpoise, and shark. The beautiful varieties of parrot fish, angel fish (well named for its beauty), the quaint cow fish, and others peculiar to the American tropies are all to be found.

It will be a month or two before the collection cad be sufficiently examined to attempt a catalogue, after which time most of the curiosities will be placed on exhibition in the National museum.

Glenwood Cemetery.

At the annual meeting of the lotholders of Glenwood Cemetery, at Marini's hall, last night, the following trustees were elected : Messra, Thomas J. Pisher, John McClelland, and Lewis Ciephane. The annual report was submitted by the secretary. It showed re-ceipts for the year, $9,588; expenditures, $8,-797.36; No. of interments, 319; No. of trans-fers to other cometeries, 25. Mr. Clephano stated that the custom of mounding graves is rapidly passing out of practice. He sug-gested that the lot-holders adopt the more modern plan of leveling the graves and placing stones at the head and foot.

THE DISTRICT FINANCES.

Senator Morgan Proposes That the Commissioners Shall Report Their Doings.

On Thursday last, during the consideration of the district appropriation bill, Senator Morgan attacked the present method of appropriating money, and evinced a desire to know how such money was expended. He did not like the idea of giving the district commissioners such unlimited powers as they now enjoy, and favored a more sytematic method of spending the people's money, who, he said, did not know for what they were pay-ing. For a long time back, and notably so since the incomplete investigation of the house dis-trict committee into the affairs of the district, many members and senators have evinced dissatisfaction with the management of district finances, and Senator Morgan's speech on Thursday had been heartly indersed. A member of congress, who is also a member of the district committee, said yesterday that the appropriation of the $5,000 to purchase the Gamewell police alarm sixuals was a sur-prise to him, as it seemed to be a superiluous item, when the want of street improvements, a new free bridge, and the railway question a new free bridge, and the railway question were to be considered. There is considerable mystery about the district's affairs that even congressmen have failed to solve, and the result of Mr. Fiedler's investigation developed nothing to warrant examination, although the commissioners have acknowledged that there were many old irregularities which they ware investigation.

edged that there were many old irregularities which they were investigating. In the senate yexterday Mr. Morgan introduced the following resolutions:

Essolved That the commissioners of the district be directed to report to the senate the eggregate amount collected from taxation for each of the fiscal years from 1815 to 1884, inclusive, in oach of the four quarters of the city; also, the aggregate of amounts expended in each of the said districts for each of the said ten years for street improvements, including replacement of wood, atone and Macadam pavements, hew pavements, laying side-walks, regulating grading and filling up streets, repairs to concrete pevements and Macadam road-ways, parking, for permit work and for repairs to streets, avenues, alleys, county roads, suburban streets, etc.

Miss Schriner's Entertainment.

The elecutionary and musical recitals to be given by Miss Schriner and her pupils, assisted by Dr. Bischoff and the St. Cecilia Quartette, at the Congregational church, on Wednesday evening next, will, without Wednesday evening next, will, without doubt, prove one of the most pleasing enter-tainments of the year. To Miss Schriner is due the gratitude of all interested in the dramatic education of local talent. Probably no teacher has done more toward bringing out our many able amateurs than this estimable lady. To her instruction alone the popular Lawrence Earrett club owes its first success, and hundreds of teachers have been among her pupils. The certainty of Dr. among her pupils. The certainty of Dr. Bischoff and the St. Cecilia quartette delighting their audience is established beyond doubt. The quartette has just returned from successful engagements at Clarksburg, Cum-berland, Baltimore, and Richmond.

The executive committee of the Humane ciety held its regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon. The report of Treasurer Trucil showed a healthy condition. Agent Key's report for the month showed 167 cases investigated and thirty prosecutions. The roport of General Agent Russell on the subject of stock transportation on the railroad lines running through the district was proof of the necessity for constant vigilance of the officer in that field. The facts presented were such as demanded public attention, not for charitable and humane considerations only, but for their bearing on the general health and public welfare.

Protest of the Fishermen. You have alluded to the differences of view held on principle by some of your brethren. I have two words to sey: To all those that hunger after fraternal relations in all the length of its present meaning, and all the possibilities of its future outcome, this assembly to day, standing before God, and with all the solemnity of an appeal to you, earnestly defens to have swept away everything that shall bluder our meeting as men face to face with each other in the love of Christ and in the work of God, taking that for all that it may possibly mean. As for those whom you represent as men doubting the wisdom and propriety of such fraternal relations, we can therefore say the whole question is a question for them to consider among the brethren within your own organization. If your organization desires this relationship to continue, and to go further, we are content with that. It is a question in which you are now charged with the responsibility, in our judgment. We have exhausted our resources in that direction; and in its discussion we pray upon you the divine blessings of that spirit of God who, when man's wisdom was exhausted, took the matter into His own hands, and is working out that which you and we both are striving to find and know—the will of our Father on high.

FRANK LANGSTON'S TRIAL.

The Points of Law and Arguments of Counsel Presented Yesterday.

The trial of Frank Langston entered upon its second week yesterday in the criminal court before Justice MacArthur, and it is expected that the case will be given to the jury before noon to-day. Judge MacArthur inquired if it would be of benefit to the counsel to have the law settled before the counsel to have the law settled before the argument was entered upon, and being answered in the affirmative, directed that they submit their propositions of law.

Each side presented their prayers, which were passed upon, some granted, others modified, and several refused.

Assistant District Attorney Coyle opened the argument to the jury in behalf of the government. He reviewed the testimony at considerable length, claimed that the prosecution had made out its case, and that the defendant should be found guilty as indicted.

Mr. H. E. Davis followed for the accused. Mr. H. E. Davis followed for the accused. and made a very brilliant argument, first discussed the testimony presented the government upon which conviction was claimed, and asserted that it was contra-dictory, especially that of Dennis Williams and Nancy Nicholas, and should be believed only where it was strongly corroborated. The other witnesses, he thought, so far as their testimous was concerned, might as well have been called on one side as on the other.

Taking the evidence for the defendant he Taking the evidence for the defendant he claimed that it steed unshaken, and even where assailed it had not yielded in the slightest degree. They not only claimed the sheeting was done in self-defense, but had established it by the proof, and the jury should by their verdict restore the accused his liberty. At the close of his argument the court adjourned for the day.

Death of Sister Blanche. Sister Blanche, the superior of St. Vincent's Female Orphan asylum, on the corner of Tenth and G streets, died last evening shortly before 6 o'clock, after an illness of several months. Her death had been hourly expected since Sunday morning. She was 64 years old, and was born in Ireland, her name before entering the order of the Sisters of Charity being Rooney. She was a cousin of the late Father Boyle, of this city, and was in charge of the orphan asylum at Richmond, Va, during the war. Upon the death of Sister Superior Lucy, of St. Vincent's, in 1865, she was called to the charge of this institution, which has been under her fostering care over since—a period of nineteen years. Sister Blanche was a noble, self-sacrificing char-acter, and dearly beloved by all who knew her. The order to which she belonged and the cause of humanity for which she has so long and so faithfully labored sustain a deeply felt loss in her death.

Piente of the Druids.

The sharp crack of the rifle and the rolling of bowling balls, mingled with strains of music at Guethler's park last night. The large pavilion was crowded with gay dancers, large pavilion was crowded with gay dancers, and many families occupied cool arbors in the grove. The occasion was the annual moonlight picnic of Washington Grove, No. 1, Ancient Order of Druids. Washington Grove of Druids is composed largely of Germans, and those present last night spont their time at prize bowling and shooting, and cating Teutonic lunches of switzer and bologna, assisted by copious draughts of foaming lager beer. The committee of Druids in charge were Messra. Julius Juenemann, Rudolph Aufentic, Nick Tiel, George Hatterrich, and John B. Buechling. John B. Buechling. See announcement in another column that

Mr. Levy, the great cornetist, has been com-pelled, by sudden illness, to discontinue his engagement at Driver's gardon. The regular opening of the garden takes place next Monday ovening.

Dentistry in the District. Senator Morrill introduced in the senate yesterday a bill regulating the practice of dentistry in the district, which forbids the practice by any person who has not received a diploma from a regular dental college, and a diploma from a regular dontal college, and for violation of this a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $200 is imposed. The bit also authorizes the Washington City Dental society to annually appoint a beard of examiners to carry out the provisions of the law. In connection with the bill Mr. Morrill presented a "brief," or memorial, signed by a committee of the Dental society, explaining the reasons why the act is urged.

Excursion of the Growlers. Washington lodge, No. 2, of the Growlers, having chartered the steamer Corcoran for a moonlight excursion to Marshall Hall, will leave her wharf, foot of Seventh street, on Friday evening, June 6, at 6:30 o'clock, with a select party of ladies and gentlemen, and return at 12. Schroeder's erchestra will furnish the orchestral music on the trip and the Apollo Gice club will furnish some of their

WASHINGTON CITY PRESBYTERY. choice chorus selections. Other musical talent from New York and Philadelphia will take part, and it is intended that a great treat shall be given the excursionists. Great preparations have been made to make this excursion what it should be, a select affair.

EISDIAN BAOS, corner Seventh and E, are head quarters for boys' clothing; their elegant, enlarged boys' department, and extensive variety makes it an easy matter to make a selection; it is an acknowledged and their prices are the lowest.

Bob Bruce Will Return. The statement that Robert Bruce, the grain and provision broker doing business in Willard's hotel, has departed a la Levis is denied by his friends and not generally be-lieved by anybody. He has gone to Chicago, his old home, on business, and told many of his friends and customers before going that he intended to go. He will return next Thursday.
